Lighthouse description

The Pločica Lighthouse is situated on the island of Pločica between the island of Hvar and Korčula, and the Pelješac peninsula. That small island has a few particular features that attract guests: very small altitude and shallow waters on the north side, beautiful seabed and impressive rocks on the south side. This lighthouse is especially recommended to those interested in autonomous diving. The lighthouse can accommodate a larger number of guests, as it consists of two big apartments. Apartment A is intended for 6 persons, and apartment B for 8 persons. Each apartment has two bathrooms. Since the lighthouse is automated and there is no lighthouse staff, guests can freely enjoy its natural and unique environment. A person in charge of the lighthouse, guests' requirements and diving organization is situated in a place Prigradica, on the island of Korčula. The transport of the guests to the lighthouse is organized from that place.

Did you know...

... that Pločica lighthouse is situated on an island adorned with all the unique beauties of the Adriatic Sea?

Pločica lighthouse is located on the namesake island which is lightened during the night by two other lighthouses - Sućuraj on Hvar Island and Lovište on Pelješac Peninsula. Pločica is adorned with all the unique beauties of the Adriatic Sea. What makes this island special is its low altitude, shallow sea on the northern part and interesting rocky bottom at the southern part. Pločica is perfect for large groups seeking to spend a relaxing vacation filled with activities such as diving, sunbathing and swimming. Moreover, Pločica is famous for its rich fish life. You can dive into its lively underworld and check it yourself. Supposedly there are big dusky groupers dozing idly at rocks and ten kilos heavy toothfish swimming around them. No doubt Pločica will please every patient fisherman as it has all its visitors in the past.
